NAKHON SI THAMMARAT

INTRODUCTION

Nakhon Si Thammarat is known locally as Muang Nakhon. The province covers an area of 9,942 square kilometres and is divided into 16 districts (amphurs) and 2 sub-districts. The provincial capital is some 800 kilometres south of Bangkok. The provincial population numbered 1,376,926 in 1989. The capital was the centre of an ancient and highly sophisticated civilisation.

During the late 1200s, trade flourished between Nakhon Si Thammarat and southern India, especially Sri Lanka. Inter-marriage between Indian merchants and local inhabitants saw several merchants settle in the area of Hat Sai Kaeow (Crystal Sand Beach). Hat Sai Kaeow is now the area where the city's oldest temple, Wat Phra Mahathat, is located. Artifacts found in this area indicate the area was probably the centre of Buddhism more than 1,700 years ago during the Srivichaya period.

Nakhon Si Thammarat is historically and culturally rich.

CLIMATE

Southern Thailand has two distinct seasons. The Rains Season extends from June until January. The Hot Season extends from February until May. Average temperatures are 36°C.

ATTRACTIONS

City Attractions

Wat Phra Mahathat is one of southern Thailand's most revered Buddhist shrines. An extensive complex is centred on the 77-metre pagoda. The spire stands on a square platform decorated with 8 of the Buddha's followers on each side, and is covered with gold leaf.

The pagoda was probably built some 1,700 years ago during the Srivichaya period to house Buddha relics brought from Sri Lanka.

A small museum within the temple complex houses many priceless artifacts.

The Luang Chapel to the left of the main pagoda is a perfect example of Ayudhyan-style art. The chapel ceiling is intricately painted and decorated.

The Phra Ma building contains two national masterpieces. The mural at the base of the stairway depicts the Buddha's life before he attained Enlightenment. The door at the top of the stairway dates back to the Sukhothai or early Ayudhya period and is intricately carved with figures of the Hindu gods Brahma and Vishnu.

Other important city temples are:

Semamuang Temple

A stone inscription was found here recounting the origin and usage of the word Sawasdee which all Thais use for greeting. The stone inscription is currently kept in Bangkok's National Museum.

Wang Tawan Tok Temple

A Southern Thai-style house in the temple complex was begun in 1888. The structure took 13 years to complete. The building was constructed without nails. It is actually 3 buildings joined together, sharing the same floor, but with separate roofs. Door panels, gables and window frames are intricately carved.

Chaeng Temple

This was built during the mid 1780s. Keng Jeen, a small Chinese-style building, is decorated with wood imported from China. Two small pagodas in this building contain the ashes of one of Nakhon Si Thammarat's rulers and his wife.

Pradu Temple

The ashes of King Taksin, who ruled Thailand between 1767 and 1782, are housed in this temple, which is some 200 years old. The boat-shaped chapel has a large lotus carved on the east gable.

Phra Buddha Si Hing Chapel

A sacred Buddha image from Sri Lanka, and one of the most important Buddha images in Thailand, is located here.

There are many Brahman-style shrines along Ratchadamnoen Road, particularly the Isuan (Shiva) and Vishnu shrines.

The National Museum houses many priceless artifacts, as well as locally produced art. Notable artifacts include the kettle drum from the Dong Son culture. Locally produced art includes exquisitely hand-woven bags made from the clinging vine called yan lipao. Such bags were always chosen as gifts for Thai royalty. There is also an unusual collection of folk art including walking sticks and clothing.

The City Wall and Northern Gate originally measured some 400 metres (including the Northern Gate) by 2,300 metres. Renovations were made during the reign of Ayudhya's King Ramesuan (1399-1395) and King Narai (1656-1688). The last restoration was in 1990.

The Weerathai Monument commemorates Thai soldiers who bravely fought Japanese invaders at Tha Phae on December 8, 1941, during the Second World War.

OUT-OF-CITY ATTRACTIONS

Surat Thani-Nakhon Si Thammarat Highway 401

Hin Ngam Beach is a rocky beach located 4.5 kilometres from Sri Chan district, 66 kilometres north of the provincial capital. Accommodation is available.

Khanom Beach, approximately 100 kilometres north of the provincial capital, actually comprises 3 sandy beaches. The area is quiet and tranquil.

Nai Phlae Beach is located in the immediate vicinity.

Khao Wang Thong Cave is one of the most beautiful caves in Thailand. The cave is located in Khanom district, and can be reached by a 90-kilometre journey from the provincial capital along Highway 4014, thence onto Highway 4142 for 5 kilometres, and a left turn for a further 6 kilometres.

Nakhon Si Thammarat-Lan Saka District Highway 4015

Khao Luang National Park covers 570 square kilometres. Park topography encompasses lush greenery, orchards and mountains. The mountains contain several picturesque waterfalls. Adjacent areas are ideal for hiking and swimming. Some of the more popular falls are:

Karom Waterfall

This is reached from the city by following Highway 4016 for 9 kilometres. Turn left onto Highway 4015 towards Lan Saka district for 20 kilometres. The waterfall is a 3-kilometre walk from the road.

Phrom Lok Waterfall

The 3-level waterfall is one of the park's largest cascades. From the city, travel along Highway 4016 for 21 kilometres. Turn left onto Highway 4152 and travel another 5 kilometres.

Krung Ching Waterfall

This spectacular waterfall has many levels. One cascade is aptly named Nam Fon Saen-Ha (One Hundred Thousand Raindrops). Food and accommodation are available at the falls, which are 70 kilometres from the city along Highway 4016, and a 4-kilometre walk from the main road.

Information regarding accommodation may be obtained from Bangkok's National Park Division of the Forestry Department Tel: 579-0529 or 570-4842 or National Park Section, Nakhon Si Thammarat Tel: 356-134

Kiriwong Village is located some 26 kilometres from the city, following Highway 4016 for 9 kilometres, Highway 4015 for 9 kilometres, and making a right turn for another 8 kilometres.

Kiriwong villagers are friendly and hospitable. The hamlet is located at the foot of Khao Luang Mountain which rises to some 1,380 metres. The village is the base from which to hike up the mountain, and most of the area was destroyed during 1988 floods and landslides when silt made certain areas resemble desert.

Lush forests, cool streams with sandy banks and the hospitable villagers combine to make the area an ideal setting for savouring the Thai countryside. Moreover, surrounding areas contain orchards where villagers cultivate many of Thailand's most delicious tropical fruits, including durians, rambutans and mangosteens.

SPECIAL INTEREST

Bull Fighting, bull pitted against bull, is a popular sport throughout southern Thailand particularly in Nakhon Si Thammarat

Shadow Play Figures from the Nang Talung Shadow Play originated in this area. The cowhide, two-dimensional figures resemble colourful stencils, and depict major characters from classical and modern Thai dramas. It is possible to visit Suchart House to see how these intricately worked figures are made.

MAJOR EVENTS & FESTIVALS

Most events celebrated during ancient times are still celebrated today. Major annual occurrences include:

Prapheni Duan Sip

The 'Tenth-Month Festival' is celebrated on the last three days of the waning moon in October (the tenth Lunar Month). According to popular belief, this is the period when the spirits of ancestors visit their relatives. During this period, the living make merit for the dead. The auspicious festival is a 10-day celebration at the city's Sanam Na Muang. The major event is the Hmruab Procession along Ratchadamnoen Road to Wat Phra Mahathat. People from all over Thailand participate in merit-making and religious rituals.

Hae Pha Khun Thart Homage Paying Ceremony

This spectacular event occurs during the third lunar month (late February or early March) each year. During the 3-day event, local residents pay homage to Buddha relics enshrined at Wat Phra Mahathat. A number of religious ceremonies include a traditional merit-making procession which carries a cloth painting depicting the Buddha's life story, and which is placed around the temple's pagoda.

Mangosteen Festival

Mangosteens are grown in many provincial orchards. The festival in late July or early August features this favourite fruit, besides publicising local handicrafts and shadow plays. There is a special way of eating mangosteen in Nakhon Si Thammarat, namely eating green mangosteen by a special method called Mongkut Cut.

Local buses, taxis and minibuses connect the city with outlying districts. Neighbouring provinces can be reached by road, rail or air.

SHOPPING

Handicrafts & Local Products

Nakhon Si Thammarat is promoting local co-operatives and cottage industries to revive indigenous crafts. Several local arts and crafts are locally, and internationally, well known.

Yan Lipao is a clinging vine native to Nakhon Si Thammarat. The vine is carefully split into thread, and then hand-woven into bags, baskets and other beautiful receptacles. Artisans can be seen weaving at Tha Rua Village, 10 kilometres from the city along Highway 4019.

Pha Yok is a unique cloth woven only in Nakhon Si Thammarat. Fabric patterns and colours are exquisite. A Pha Yok Weaving Centre features expert weavers at work.

Other crafts include silverware, bronzeware and neilloware. There are many craft shops along Tha Chang Road.

DINING

Nakhon Si Thammarat has numerous first-class Thai and Chinese restaurants. International fare is available in coffeeshops and hotels.

NEIGHBOURING PROVINCES

Neighbouring provincial capitals include Trang (828 kilometres from Bangkok), and Phattalung (840 kilometres from Bangkok).

Trang enjoys an extensive coastline edging the Andaman Sea. Several islands, including Koh Muk, Ko Sukon and Ko Kradan, are particularly picturesque, and feature beautiful beaches, caves and coral reefs. The coastal Hat Chao Mai National Park offers excellent beaches. Song Hong and Kantang seaside resorts offer further picturesque scenery. Birdwatchers and nature lovers will enjoy the Khlong Lamchan Waterfowl Park, and nearby waterfalls, and the Khao Chong Forest Park.

Phattalung is purportedly the original home of the southern Shadow Play, Nang Talung, and is best known for its Talay Nok Noi Waterfowl Park. The bird sanctuary occupies the northern end of the Songkhla Great Lake, Thailand's largest inland body of water, and supports more than 100 species of resident and migratory birds.
